MEMORANDUM OPINION

SHIPP, District Judge

This matter comes before the Court upon Defendants Johnson & Johnson and Johnson & Johnson Consumer Inc.’s (collectively “Defendants”) motions to dismiss Plaintiffs Rita DiCarlo (“DiCarlo”)¹, Sherry L. Franklin (“Franklin”)², Linda Kindley (“Kindley”)³, Bonita Marinaccio

² (See Franklin Compl., 3:17-05861, ECF No. 1-1; Defs.’ Franklin Moving Br., 3:17-05861, ECF No. 23-1.)

(“Marinaccio”)⁴, and Jacky A. Vient’s (“Vient”)⁵ (collectively “Plaintiffs”) Complaints for lack of personal jurisdiction.⁶ Plaintiffs did not oppose. After consideration of Defendants’ submissions, the Court decides Defendants’ motions without oral argument pursuant to Local Civil Rule 78.1. For the reasons outlined below, Defendants’ motions are granted.

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiffs’ Complaints in this matter were initially filed against Defendants in Rhode Island Superior Court alleging that the talcum powder in Defendants’ Baby Powder and Shower to Shower products (collectively the “Products”) gave them ovarian cancer. (See generally Compls.⁷) DiCarlo and Marinaccio are Massachusetts residents, Franklin and Kindley are North Carolina residents, and Vient is a Florida resident. (Id. ¶ 1.) Defendants are incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, and have a principal place of business at One Johnson & Johnson Plaza, New Brunswick, New Jersey. (Id. ¶ 2-3.) Defendants distribute, sell, and market the Products in Rhode Island. (Id. ¶ 10.) Additionally, Defendants are registered with the Rhode Island Secretary of State

⁴ (See Marinaccio Compl., 3:17-05873, ECF No. 1-1; Defs.’ Marinaccio Moving Br., 3:17-05873, ECF No. 23-1.)

⁷ Where the Court cites “Compls.” with no individual’s name identified, the citation refers collectively and simultaneously to all Plaintiffs’ Complaints and the cited paragraph(s) therein.

and have a registered agent in East Providence, Rhode Island. (Id. ¶¶ 2-3, 10.) At all times relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims, Defendants did business in Rhode Island. (Id. ¶ 2-3.)

For years, Plaintiffs used the Products daily as advertised. (DiCarlo Compl. ¶ 98; Franklin Compl. ¶ 98; Kindley Compl. ¶ 96; Marinaccio Compl. ¶ 96; Vient Compl. ¶ 98.) Plaintiffs purchased the Products at CVS Pharmacy, Inc. (“CVS”) locations in various states. (DiCarlo Compl. ¶ 99; Franklin Compl. ¶ 99; Kindley Compl. ¶ 97; Marinaccio Compl. ¶ 97; Vient Compl. ¶ 99.) For instance, Franklin specifies that she purchased the Products at a CVS in Catawba County, North Carolina. (Franklin Compl. ¶ 99.) Vient, on the other hand, purchased the Products at a CVS in St. Lucie County, Florida. (Vient Compl. ¶ 99.) DiCarlo, Kindley, and Marinaccio do not allege in which state or county they purchased the Products. (See DiCarlo Compl. ¶¶ 98-100; Kindley Compl. ¶¶ 96-98; Marinaccio Compl. ¶¶ 96-98.) Additionally, none of the Plaintiffs allege in which state(s) they applied or used the Products, nor does any Plaintiff claim to have purchased or otherwise used the Products in Rhode Island. (See generally Compls.)

Plaintiffs leverage twelve Counts against Defendants in the Complaints. These twelve counts include: (1) Negligence; (2) Strict Product Liability—Defective Design; (3) Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress; (4) Breach of Express Warranty; (5) Breach of Implied Warranty; (6) Concert of Action; (7) Civil Conspiracy; (8) Fraud; (9) Negligent Misrepresentation; (10) Failure to Warn; (11) Rhode Island Deceptive Trade Practices; and (12) Punitive Damages. (See generally id.) Defendants move to dismiss all Plaintiffs’ claims against them for lack of personal jurisdiction. (See generally Defs.’ Moving Brs.⁸)

II. LEGAL STANDARD

Under Federal Rule⁹ of Civil Procedure¹² (b)(2), a defendant may move to dismiss an action for lack of personal jurisdiction. “[O]nce a defendant has raised a jurisdictional defense, the plaintiff must prov[e] by affidavits or other competent evidence that jurisdiction is proper.” Metcalf v. Renaissance Marine, Inc., 566 F.3d 324, 330 (3d Cir. 2009) (second alteration in original) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted).

A federal district court may exercise two types of personal jurisdiction: general jurisdiction and specific jurisdiction. O’Connor v. Sandy Lane Hotel Co., 496 F.3d 312, 317 (3d Cir. 2007) (citing Helicopteros Nacionales de Colombia, S.A. v. Hall, 466 U.S. 408, 414-15 & n.9 (1984)). General jurisdiction exists when a defendant’s “affiliations with the State are so ‘continuous and systematic’ as to render [it] essentially at home in the forum State.” Daimler AG v. Bauman, 571 U.S. 117, 119 (2014) (alteration in original) (quoting Goodyear Dunlop Tires Operations, S.A. v. Brown, 564 U.S. 915, 919 (2011)). “The ‘paradigm’ forums in which a corporate defendant is ‘at home’ are the corporation’s place of incorporation and its principal place of business.” BNSF Ry. Co. v. Tyrrell, 581 U.S. 402, 413 (2017) (citing Daimler, 571 U.S. at 137). Specific jurisdiction allows a court to exercise jurisdiction over a non-resident defendant where: (1) the defendant “purposefully avail[ed] itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum”; (2) the litigation “aris[es] out of or relate[s] to the defendant’s contacts with the forum”; and (3) the exercise of jurisdiction “does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.” Goodyear, 564 U.S. at 923-24 (alterations in original) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted).

When the district court does not hold an evidentiary hearing, “the plaintiff need only establish a prima facie case of personal jurisdiction and the plaintiff is entitled to have its allegations taken as true and all factual disputes drawn in its favor.” Miller Yacht Sales, Inc. v. Smith, 384 F.3d 93, 97 (3d Cir. 2004) (citations omitted). Once the plaintiff has shown minimum contacts, the burden shifts to the defendant, who must show that the assertion of jurisdiction would be unreasonable. See Mellon Bank (East) PSFS v. Farino, 960 F.2d 1217, 1226 (3d Cir. 1992).

III. DISCUSSION

Plaintiffs fail to show that Rhode Island can exercise personal jurisdiction over Defendants. As an initial matter, in a multidistrict litigation (“MDL”) proceeding, a “transferee court can [only] exercise personal jurisdiction to the same extent that the transferor court could.” In re Auto. Refinishing Paint Antitrust Litig., 358 F.3d 288, 297 n.11 (3d Cir. 2004) (citations omitted); In re Delta Dental Antitrust Litig., 509 F. Supp. 3d 1377, 1380 (J.P.M.L. 2020) (“Jurisdiction in any federal civil action must exist in the district where it is filed. This does not change when an action is transferred under Section 1407.”).¹⁰ Here, all five Plaintiffs originally filed their Complaints against Defendants in Rhode Island. (See generally Compls.) As such, Rhode Island courts are the transferor courts, and this Court is the transferee court. Accordingly, this Court only can exercise personal jurisdiction to the same extent a Rhode Island court could.¹¹

On the facts alleged, Rhode Island has neither general nor specific jurisdiction over Defendants. See Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. v. Superior Ct. of Cal., 582 U.S. 255, 262 (2017) (“Since our seminal decision in International Shoe, our decisions have recognized two types of personal jurisdiction: ‘general’ (sometimes called ‘all-purpose’) jurisdiction and ‘specific’ (sometimes called ‘case-linked’) jurisdiction.” (quoting Goodyear, 564 U.S. at 919).

First, to establish general jurisdiction over a defendant, a plaintiff must show that the defendant is essentially “at home” in the state a lawsuit is filed. Daimler, 571 U.S. at 122. As mentioned previously, “[t]he ‘paradigm’ forums in which a corporate defendant is ‘at home’ are the corporation’s place of incorporation and its principal place of business.” BNSF, 581 U.S. at 413 (citing Daimler, 571 U.S. at 137); see also Chavez v. Dole Food Co., 836 F.3d 205, 223 (3d Cir. 2016). Here, Plaintiffs do not allege that Defendants are incorporated in Rhode Island or that Rhode Island is Defendants’ principal place of business. (Compls. ¶¶ 2-3, 10.) As such, Plaintiffs have not shown that Rhode Island courts have general jurisdiction over Defendants.

Second, Plaintiffs’ Complaints aver that Rhode Island courts have specific jurisdiction over Defendants because Defendants: (1) are registered with the State of Rhode Island Secretary of State; (2) do business in the State of Rhode Island; and (3) thereby “purposefully avail [themselves] of the State through the distribution, advertisement, and sale of the” Products therein. (Id. ¶ 10) “[F]or a court to exercise specific jurisdiction over a claim, there must be an ‘affiliation between the forum and the underlying controversy, principally, [an] activity or an occurrence that takes place in the Forum State.’” Bristol-Myers Squibb, 582 U.S. at 264 (quoting Goodyear, 564 U.S. at 919). Critically here, while it is likely that Defendants engage in business in Rhode Island, no Plaintiff alleges that they have ever bought the Products, used the Products, or been harmed by the Products in Rhode Island. (See generally Compls.) In fact, none of the Plaintiffs allege that they are from Rhode Island or have ever been in the State. (See generally id.) As such, no Plaintiff can reasonably allege that Defendants ever distributed, advertised, or attempted to sell them the Products in Rhode Island, because they themselves do not allege anything to suggest they have any affiliation with the State. (See generally id.); see also Bristol-Myers Squibb, 582 U.S. at 265 (“The mere fact that other plaintiffs were prescribed, obtained, and ingested [a product] in [a certain state] . . . does not allow th[at] [s]tate to assert specific jurisdiction over the nonresidents’ claims.”). Accordingly, Plaintiffs have failed to establish that Rhode Island courts have specific jurisdiction over Defendants.

Finally, Plaintiffs appear to allege that Rhode Island’s long-arm statute grants Rhode Island courts with personal jurisdiction over Defendants notwithstanding the constitutional limitations outlined above. (See Compls. ¶ 10.) Rhode Island’s long-arm statute provides:

Every foreign corporation, every individual not a resident of this state or his or her executor or administrator, and every partnership or association, composed of any person or persons not such residents, that shall have the necessary minimum contacts with the state of Rhode Island, shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the state of Rhode Island, and the courts of this state shall hold such foreign corporations and such nonresident individuals or their executors or administrators, and such partnerships or associations amenable to suit in Rhode Island in every case not contrary to the provisions of the constitution or laws of the United States.

R.I. GEN. LAWS. § 9-5-33(a) (emphasis added). Critically, finding personal jurisdiction over Defendants when Plaintiffs fail to show general or specific jurisdiction in Rhode Island would be “contrary to the provisions of the [C]onstitution or laws of the United States.” Id.; see also Diving Servs. v. BTM Mach., Inc., No. 16-112, 2017 WL 25463, at *3 (D.R.I. Jan. 3, 2017) (“Rhode Island’s long-arm statute ‘extends up to the constitutional limitation. Therefore this Court need only focus on the limitations of the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment’” (quoting Am. Sail Training Ass'n v. Litchfield, 705 F. Supp. 75, 78 (D.R.I. 1989))). As such, Rhode Island's long-arm statute does not grant Rhode Island courts personal jurisdiction over Defendants.

All told, Plaintiffs have failed to adequately allege facts to support Rhode Island court's exercise of personal jurisdiction over Defendants. As each Plaintiff's Complaint was originally filed in Rhode Island and only transferred to this Court, each Plaintiff's Complaint, therefore, must be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(2).

IV. CONCLUSION

For the reasons outlined above, Defendants' motions to dismiss are granted. An appropriate Order will follow.
